

A certain slant of light through my Florida window highlights lost hairs on a baseball cap near the computer, and bars of dust across its screen.

You may shine at celebrations, give speeches to much applause, sing like an angel at Carnegie Hall, but all is exfoliation.